Subject: Finally going to git... (?)

With upphub working nicely, I am thinking about finally going git.

It has some problems though, it would mean that the current tree becomes locked for everybody except me as whole and the only way to change things will be pull requests. Which is in general not so different from now, but still there are parts actively developed by other ppl.

So before going there, there needs to be some further partitioning. I plan to move the sources to separate git repo (and upphub module), upbox as well, rainbow now can be removed archive or sandbox (or both). Some of internals, like "plugin/box2d" will go to separate repos as well.

One nasty problem: What to do with autogenerated Makefile? I guess that one will need to be moved to the repo?

Any comments?
